Lack of candidates forces USG to extend deadline for applicants

By Karen Ali
Daily Campus Staff

The deadline to submit applications to run for assembly seats on next year's Undergraduate Student Government has been extended 24 hours in order to get more candidates, according to USG members.

Yesterday's weather and confusion about the due date for applications could have been the reasons that so few were handed in, said Michael Kainen, USG vice-president. Since there are a lot of applications that have not been returned to USG "we are extending the deadline," he said.

There was an advertisement in the Daily Campus that Kainen said may have been misleading to students. The ad said the deadline for taking pictures for USG candidates was Wednesday, but Kainen said students may have thought that day was the deadline for submitting applications.

Twenty-six people handed in applications yesterday bringing the total number to 32. There are 26 assembly seats that have to be filled.

Steve Protter said he is disappointed that more people did not return their applications yesterday.

"I don't think the democratic process is served with uncontested elections. We think the democratic process is

U.S. military adviser killed in El Salvador

EL PARAISO, El Salvador (AP)—Guerrillas raided a major army base before dawn Tuesday, killing at least 43 soldiers and a U.S. military adviser, the first to die during battle in the 7-year-old civil war.

El Salvador's military commander said the American, identified as Staff Sgt. Gregory A. Fronius, 27, of Greensburg, Pa., was killed by mortar fire near a command post.

The military said 35 soldiers were wounded by leftist rebels who assaulted the base behind a barrage of cannon, mortar, and grenade fire. Base commander Col. Gilberto Rubio, who was slightly wounded, said the number of attackers had not been determined.

Officials said seven guerrillas died in the attack on the 4th Infantry Brigade garrison at El Paraiso in Chalatenango province, a rebel stronghold, and some penetrated the camp. El Paraiso is nearly 40 miles north of San Salvador, capital of this Central American country.

"Because of the seriousness of the injuries, the number of dead (soldiers) may increase," said Gen. Adolfo Blandon, chief of the armed forces. He visited the base to assess the situation.

Father wins right to keep Baby M

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press Writer
HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP)—A judge awarded custody of Baby M to her father Tuesday, stripped surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead of all parental rights and upheld the $10,000 contract under which she agreed to give up the child.

In the nation's first judicial ruling on surrogate parenting, Bergen County Superior Court Judge Harvey R. Sorkow said the contract was valid because just as men have a constitutional right to sell their sperm, women can decide what to do with their wombs.

Immediately after William Stern won custody in the landmark case, his wife, Elizabeth, adopted the year-old baby, whom they call Melissa. The child has been in their care while the case was argued.

Mrs. Whitehead, who had vowed to appeal, was at home when the ruling came. Earlier, she had visited with the baby and then stopped at a church to light a devotional candle.

She made no statement after the ruling was announced, but her attorneys filed for a stay of the decision pending an appeal to the state Supreme Court and for an order continuing her visitation rights.

"If the courts are going to uphold those kinds of contracts, they are basically degrading our society," said Mrs. Whitehead's attorney, Randolph Wolf.

"I have a tingling feeling in my elbows, I'm so happy," Stern said as he embraced his tearful wife after they listened to the judge read his 21/2-hour-long decision in the crowded, locked courtroom.

Mrs. Stern said she had "empathy" for Mrs. Whitehead. "Despite all the bad feelings that have gone on, on both sides, she gave us a beautiful daughter," she said.

"If she wants to be with Mary Beth, we'll do everything to help her be with Mary Beth," she said.

In Florida, the baby's maternal grandmother said she found the decision hard to believe and said her family doesn't think the battle is over.

"It's devastating. I can't believe it. Justice has not been done," said Catherine "Eileen" Messer from her retirement home in Holiday, Fla.

Sorkow made no provision for Mrs. Whitehead ever to see the child, but he ordered Stern to pay her the $10,000 agreed to in the contract. That money had been held in escrow since the contract was signed.

Sorkow said the Sterns had

Student organizations join for lobby effort at capital

By Bill Slocum
Daily Campus Staff

Two of the largest student-run organizations on campus have come together to enlist student support for a lobbying effort at the state capital.

The Undergraduate Student Government and the Connecticut Public Interest Research Group announced Tuesday that they are beginning a joint effort to help pass legislation that will provide students with financial aid and a vote on the Connecticut Board of Governors.

"We're really helping each other out," said Gail Bysiewicz, head of USG's External Affairs Committee. "We have resources they need, and they have resources we need."

The two organizations will maintain their separate efforts (USG's Better Education for Students Today and ConnPIRG's Higher Education Campaign), which are alike in their goals.

"It says something about how important this issue is when the two largest student organizations organize and come together to deal with the same issues," said ConnPIRG representative Doug Adkins.

A $20 million student financial aid package is a central interest of both groups, especially a $13 million minority aid program designed to help needy students in the state attend independent

Four held, two sought in restaurant robbery

GLASTONBURY (AP) — Four New York City men were in custody and two suspects remained at large Tuesday after a bungled robbery attempt in a Chinese restaurant touched off a nine-hour police siege.

Six armed men confronted eight or nine employees who had been watching the televised NCAA basketball championship game in a second-floor apartment of the Hunan Garden Restaurant about 11:30 p.m. Monday, police said. They said the robbers displayed two handguns and a shotgun.

One employee slipped out an exit and called police, who nabbed one man outside the building and saw another fleeing on foot, said Howard Charbonneau, a spokesman for the Glastonbury police department.

State and local police tactical units surrounded the building shortly before midnight Monday, calling in an interpreter to address the suspects over a bullhorn in the Cantonese dialect of Chinese.

Two suspects who remained inside the restaurant surrendered about 3 a.m. Tuesday.

Authorities believed one or two other men remained holed up, but when state police crept into the building shortly after 8:30 a.m., they found it was empty, Charbonneau said.

He said police believe three men, not one, fled when police arrived.

Another suspect was arrested later in the morning after he was taken off a New York-bound bus by police in Southbury, about 55 miles southwest of Glastonbury, Charbonneau said.

He said the arrival of police late Monday night set the robbers into a panic and in the confusion, employees were able to escape.

Third marine arrested in embassy spy case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A third Marine guard has been arrested in a burgeoning sex-and-spy scandal in the ranks of the Marine Corps' security guard force at the U.S. embassy in Moscow, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Staff Sgt. Robert Stanley Stufflebeam, 24, of Bloomington, Ill., was taken into custody on suspicion of failing to report contacts with Soviet women while working in Moscow from May 1985 to May 1986. He was arrested Sunday at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

"Specifically, he is suspected of having associations with Soviet women on several occasions," Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said.

Sims stressed that Stufflebeam had not been accused of espionage, as have two other former Moscow embassy guards.

Stufflebeam had commanded the two, Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, 25, and Cpl. Arnold Bracy, 21.

The Marines announced Monday that all 28 guards now at the embassy will be replaced in April, but it said the others are not suspected of wrongdoing.

The Marine Corps has charged that Lonetree escorted Soviet agents inside the embassy, shutting off security alarms that were tripped by the Russians, while Bracy stood guard. Lonetree also is accused of providing pictures and names of CIA agents on the embassy staff.

Although the Marines have refrained from making the charge publicly, Pentagon sources said both Lonetree and Bracy became involved sexually with Soviet women who worked on the embassy's staff. The Marines released the names of two women with whom the two allegedly associated but said nothing about their romantic entanglements.

Thatcher welcomes Soviet liberalization

MOSCOW (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today hailed recent Soviet liberalization moves but said much remains to be done. She also underscored East-West disagreement on how to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Mrs. Thatcher, on a five-day official visit that began Saturday, told a news conference this trip is "the most fascinating and invigorating I have ever made abroad as prime minister."

Earlier today, in another demonstration of her support for Soviet human rights activists, she met with dissidents Andrei Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner.

At the news conference Mrs. Thatcher recalled she first met Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev when he visited London in December 1984, three months before he became Communist Party general secretary.

"I said he was someone I was able to do business with. Well, we were able to do business yesterday (Monday)," she said.

The two leaders met for nearly nine hours Monday. She said they discussed arms control, Afghanistan, human rights and Soviet-British relations.

"We both believe in speaking frankly and we had plenty of opportunity for that," she said.

She mentioned Gorbachev's programs for increasing economic efficiency and allowing greater debate on some social issues.

"I warmly welcome this process. Anything that makes the Soviet Union a more open society will strengthen trust and confidence."

HARTFORD (AP) — The state House of Representatives on Tuesday rejected a Republican proposal requiring registration stickers on front license plates beginning July 1 when the state begins phasing in the return of the two-plate system.

HARTFORD (AP) — At least 68 members of Congress around the country say they won't accept the $12,100 pay raise taking effect Wednesday, but the list doesn't include any of Connecticut's eight members.

"Just as corporations pay to get quality people, one would hope the people would want quality representation in Congress," said U.S. Rep. Stewart B. McKinney, R-4th District, through spokeswoman Diane Brockett.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled House voted 350-73 Tuesday to override President Reagan's veto of an $88 billion highway and mass transit bill, sending the measure to the Senate for the final round of a bruising political struggle.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A pickup truck loaded with tires and apparently abandoned along a highway has proved too tempting for 11 people, police say.

The truck has been parked at various locations and kept under police surveillance for about a week. Eleven people have been arrested on theft charges in "Operation Road Treasure."

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Angry women jeered 38 defendants entering court today for their trial on charges of selling tainted cooking oil that prosecutors say killed 584 people six years ago.

On the second day of the trial today, the court rejected a defense motion to dismiss charges against the defendants of homicide, fraud and crimes against the public health.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem kidnappers said Tuesday that the health of hostage Alann Steen was "deteriorating day by day" and renewed a demand to swap him, two other Americans and an Indian for 400 Arabs in Israeli jails.

"Steen's death will not alter the demand for the release of 400 prisoners," the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine said.

colleges. Also a key point in both groups' efforts is a measure that would give two students presently on the Connecticut Board of Governors a vote in BOG's affairs. Two students are present at meetings but have no vote, being called "vested interests" by Gov. William O'Neill.

"It's time to move the students up and give them an official say," Adkins said.

Other issues include the removal of a sales tax from college textbooks, as well as financial aid for commuters and part-time students. USG will also be pushing for the passage of UConn's Budget as proposed by the university.

"It is important that UConn's budget be passed in its entirety," Bysiewicz said, "so it will be made a better place." ConnPIRG, because of its position as a statewide organization, will not be pushing for UConn's budget.

Using USG's newly-installed computer network, a listing of prospective student lobbyists has been assembled. In a pamphlet, BEST recommends several forms of lobbying, such as calling or writing state senators and representatives, speaking out at public hearings and volunteering to become a member of the External Affairs Committee.

While still in the planning stages, 26 letters, one from each USG assembly member, were sent to various state legislators yesterday. Bysiewicz said that USG "wants students to draw on their personal experience" as students in their letters.

Adkins said there is "short time line" before the legislation is voted on in the capital. Starting today, the two organizations are expected to be working on enlisting student support, USG will be speaking to dorm councils and student organizations, while ConnPIRG enlists student support on a more individual basis. ???

On April 15, according to Adkins, ConnPIRG and USG will participate in a nationwide campaign for student aid and higher education issues in Hartford. "We hope to have a lot of students down," he said, "both to put pressure on the legislatures and help students learn about the capital."

This is the first time the two student organizations have worked together on any extended project, and Bysiewicz says so far there are "no problems." Adkins added that he was hoping the two groups would be able to work on "other efforts" as well.

shown a stable, secure, loving relationship, the ability to provide financially and psychologically for the future needs of the baby and "an ability to make rational decisions in the most trying of circumstances."

"The Sterns live a private, unremarkable life," the judge said.

"Mrs. Whitehead seems not to have found the time for family therapy sessions while making herself and her children available to the media."

Sorkow also said the Sterns would better be able to explain to the child her unusual beginnings in the years to come.

Mrs. Stern said she and her husband will explain the circumstances of the child's birth to her "sooner than nine or 10 years from now. We will explain it to her when she asks."

The judge said the Whiteheads' life has been marked by domestic and marital instability and that Mrs. Whitehead has been shown to "impose herself" on her two other children.

The judge condemned Mrs. Whitehead as impulsive and exploitive and said she either selectively omitted information or lied outright about aspects of her life during testimony.

He also found that surrogate parenting does not constitute baby selling, saying, "the biological father pays the surrogate for her willingness to be impregnated and carry his child to term....He cannot purchase what is already his."

...U.S. Adviser killed

Soldiers on the scene estimated government casualties at about 65 dead and more than 100 wounded.

According to U.S. policy, American advisers do not participate in offensive military action or enter areas where combat is occurring or likely, but may visit "carefully selected and secure sites" such as garrisons. They are armed and may respond if fired upon.

The United States has a self-imposed ceiling of 55 on the number of advisers serving in El Salvador at one time, but fewer sometimes are on duty.

Tuesday's rebel attack was the largest since a June 1986 guerrilla assault on the army base at San Miguel, 86 miles east of San Salvador. The military said 50 soldiers were killed or wounded there, but the rebels claimed a total of 250.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Pen Agnew said Fronius was training Salvadoran troops at the El Paraiso garrison.

At the Pentagon in Washington, the Army said he had a wife and child and was assigned to the 3rd Battalion, 7th Special Forces Group, based in Panama.

Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said the sergeant was part of a two-man team assigned to the area and his partner was not at the garrison when the rebels attacked.

Blandon said the rebels began firing mortars, grenade launchers and a 90mm cannon at 2 a.m., aiming at the command post, barracks and officers' mess. He said 250 soldiers were at the base.

Most of the dead and wounded were in the barracks and "there may have been infiltrations because some of the bodies of the terrorists were found inside the barracks," Blandon said.

The command post, a barracks and an officers' mess were destroyed and other buildings damaged. Reporters saw at least three destroyed military vehicles.

This is not about April Fools day...

By Keith Phaneuf
Campus Correspondent

Sometimes it's a "kick me" sign pinned secretly to the seat of your blue jeans. Or a sugar bowl filled with salt is one of its more traditional tricks. It can even take the form of a stolen towel, leaving a helpless victim stranded in the shower.

It's the April Fools' Day prank, and for 24 hours, no one is safe.

Don't take today lightly. The custom of playing practical jokes on the unsuspecting on the first of April has a rich history. Many folklorists believe the art of April Fooling began in 1564 in France with the adoption of the reformed calendar. The new system moved New Year's Day from April 1 to January 1, and those who resisted the change were sent mock gifts by pranksters.

Observance of April Fools' Day caught on in England in the 18th century, and the "fool's errand" was the popular prank. Usually an unsuspecting youngster was sent out to find pigeon's milk, a half penny's worth of ink, or keys for the oarlocks.

The custom was brought to America by the British, and nowhere is April Fooling more popular than in the U.S., says Jack O. Rosenbalm, President of the American Humor Studies Association at Southwest Texas State University.

"Americans seem to have a real gift for seeing the strange and the ridiculous," Rosenbalm said.

"We also enjoy directing pranks at pompous individuals and cutting down authority figures," Rosenbalm said.

"Perhaps it's because of our democratic heritage, but it's always more fun to put tacks on a teacher's chair than on a student's."

Since its development in the late 19th century, the telephone has played an important role in April Fools' Day jokes.

The New York Aquarium and Zoological Garden has its phone lines disconnected on the first of April. Aquarium officials reportedly received a number of callers wishing to speak with Mr. Fish, Miss Fox, or Mrs. Lyon.

Along the same lines, pranksters have often delivered April Fools' Day messages to their local butchers, asking to speak with Mr. Lamb or Mr. Wiener.

While the first of April is generally considered a day for the amateur practical joker, some people consider it a time to show off their specialties.

Don Reed is the Vice-President of the Burlington Liars Club in Burlington, Wis. or at least he claims to be. "Lies make for excellent April Fool's Day jokes," Reed says. "You can believe that because I've never told a lie in my life."

Reed says some of the more common April Fools' day lies--

"hole in your sock, spot on your tie, food in your teeth"--are fine, but the best lies take imagination.

Reed suggests this untruth submitted by one of the club's "champion liars" from Eckland, Mo. "A man walking down the street actually saw a politician with his hands in his own pockets."

Although most people seem to put up with April Fools' Day and its pranks, but there are those who should not be tricked. Bruce Chapman says he and the other 5400 people in his organization have been the butt of many jokes and have learned how to deal with pranksters.

Chapman, who bears the title, supreme archnerd, heads up the Cincinnati, Ohio based International Organization of Nerds. "Ever since I had gum rubbed in my hair back in high school, I've learned there's only one way to deal with a practical joke," Chapman said. "Revenge!"

What type of revenge would a nerd take against an April Fools' Day prankster? "Who knows what a nerd will do?" Chapman said. "We let those who pull the jokes worry about that."

If you still don't feel too safe about going out on April Fools' Day, don't worry about it. The university hasn't held classes on April first since 1905. Trust me.

Shoes are the news this year

NEW YORK (AP)—It's back to the classics in colors and styles for fashion footwear this spring, according to industry sources who say that the most popular colors are the old favorites, black and white.

"White will be especially important," says Larry Rosenbloom, a buyer for Kinney Shoes.

Men will choose comfortable, less formal footwear, headed by classic all-leather and fabric jazz-style oxfords and soft Brazilian leather slip-ons, he says.

"The fabric jazz shoe, which comes in white, grain and natural juste canvas, is a lighter version of the extremely popular leather style," Rosenbloom says. "The leather slip-on is made of soft, woven leather and is very comfortable. You could say it's a dressed-up version of the hurache sandal and has the same distinctive, stylish Brazilian look."

A return to feminine styling in women's and girls' fashions has welcomed back the bow as a major accent. Bows can be found everywhere—in hair, on dresses, gowns, business suits and shoes.

"They add a dressy, flirtatious silhouette to footwear, especially when the bow decorates the back of the shoe," says Dwain Lipker, women's buying vice president at Kinney, who predicts that pumps trimmed with back bows will be popular this spring.

"Open-toed shoes and pumps with cut-out designs often light-hearted, airy comfort," he says. "And for the perfect color match, nothing beats dyeable shoes. Satin in particular is an important material for dyeable pumps this year. It's a brighter, shinier fabric and adds that extra feminine spark sought after today."

Accessories such as clip-ons can transform a plain shoe into a dramatic one, notes Vinnie Vesce, Kinney's accessories buying vice president. Rhinestone clips add dazzle, he points out, and the increasingly popular bow clips challenge imaginative women to design their own special treatments.

For example, he says, the entire look of a shoe can be changed by choosing either a coordinating or contrasting color bow.

"Bows can be creatively placed anywhere along the rim of the shoe, even along the sides," Vesce explains. "Like the shoes, the most popular spring bow colors are black and white."

"Little girls' shoes styles for spring remain classic and feminine," says Steven

Cassidy, Kinney's children's buying vice president. "There have always been bows on little girls' dress shoes but right now they're more popular than ever."

Fashionable little girls' spring outfits will include a pair of patent bow-trimmed shoes in white, black or pink, he says. Bows on girls' shoes are a big, growing business and lace-topped anklets add a frilly finishing touch to these shoes.

Little boys' dress footwear will have the "grown-up" classic look of their fathers and older brothers.

"Just like dad's, leather jazz shoes are one of the most popular dress footwear styles for boys," Cassidy says. "Again, black and white are the important colors."

Keaton does documentaries

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Diane Keaton sat in a booth at the Sunset Strip coffee shop trying to look inconspicuous in a derby hat and a man's coat and pants, all black, with a high-collared white shirt with a tie.

It was mid-afternoon, and the few customers who occupied the other booths tried not to stare as she gave an interview about her new movie, "Heaven".

"Heaven" is a series of interviews with a variety of people talking about their concepts of heaven, interspersed with depictions of heaven from feature films, television shows and religious programs.

"It was a huge undertaking," she said with a large sigh. "I spent a year in the editing room. First of all, I had to see all that footage. Religious films, films from all of the studios, everything had to be looked at. It was a big research job. I don't think I'd ever undertake another film with so much research."

"I liked it. I enjoyed looking. That was not a problem for me."

Keaton made a 17-minute film in 1982, "What Does Dorrie Want?" about her sister. She found another subject while touring the visitors' center at the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City with director Jonathan Demme ("Melvin and Howard"). They viewed a film depicting the Mormon concept of heaven.

"I wanted to do another film, but not a scripted one; I wasn't ready for that," she said. "I was thinking in the religious area, because I was always fascinated by movies about heaven. When I saw the film at the visitors' center I thought, 'Gee, it would be fun to find a lot of films like this, and combine it with interviews.' It took a long time after that."

RCA Productions agreed to underwrite the project's budget, just under a million dollars.

Champion skater: a UConn unknown

By Anthony J. Smith
Campus Correspondent

While many students headed South for spring break, Jan Bombassei opted to stay in the North and do what she does best—skate.

Bombassei, a UConn sophomore, spent her vacation skating in two different shows in New England. The first show was in New Hampshire at the University of New Hampshire and the second was at the Ridgefield Skating Center in Ridgefield, Connecticut.

Unknown to most students and faculty at UConn, Bombassei is the reigning 1986 National Collegiate freestyle champion. The competition which is under NCAA rule was held last April in Lake Placid, New York. Bombassei skated against 19 other students from as far away as California.

Bombassei said she particularly liked this competition because each skater had the option to perform the type of skating they feel strongest in. These include freestyle and compulsory skating. Bombassei chose the freestyle exercise because she prefers stunts like the triple soukow and double axles rather than tracing figure 8's on the ice which is part of the compulsory exercise.

The shows are not paying jobs said Bombassei and cannot be if she wants to hold onto her amateur status. She must shoulder all expenses, but Bombassei says the shows are worth it.

Skating has been a part of Bombassei's life since she started at age 8. She started competing when she was 13. After high school, Bombassei dedicated an average of 6 hours of practice, 6 days a week. Last year she was offered a soloist spot with Ice Capades, but turned it down feeling that it was too early to turn professional.

Presently UConn does not have a strong skating program. In fact the athletic department was not even aware of her champion status until Bombassei asked about obtaining varsity sweats. "I asked for varsity sweats once because at the time I was freezing," said Bombassei. Members of the department were very impressed with her title, she said, and she received the sweats.

Bombassei plans to continue competing in the National Collegiate Championship, but for now her education has taken precedence. She is working towards a degree in education and as for her skating Jan hopes to turn professional and teach her skills to others.

'It is everything to me'

Piano popular with Miss Americas

DALLAS (AP)—A pretty girl may be like a melody, but Miss America hopefuls actually play the melodies—on the piano. In fact, piano playing is one of the talents most frequently chosen by women competing in the annual pageant.

To find out why piano is so popular with America's "Misses," the National Piano Foundation headquartered in Dallas recently surveyed past contestants and winners.

Their reasons are as varied as the women themselves, but all agree that the ability to play the piano has affected their lives well beyond their pageant days.

"I had performed for so many years that the talent competition was the easiest part of the pageant for me," says Amy Sue Linder Beninato, Miss Massachusetts 1980. "In the talent segment the focus is entirely on your capabilities as a performer, not just on outward appearance."

Choosing the piano as her talent was also a natural for Carol Janson, Miss Colorado 1986 and a student at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. "Piano has been my life since early childhood," she says. "It is everything to me." Janson's ultimate goal is to become a concert pianist and teach at a university.

"Music study definitely gives you a discipline that applies to every aspect of your life," she says. "Not only do you learn to apply practice and study principles that help in other academic areas, but music study also gives you a special insight and a deeper appreciation of the arts."

While being a "Miss" has interrupted her usual practice and performance schedule, Janson still manages to squeeze in three to four hours of practice each day and has several performances planned for spring.

Contestants say sharing their talents with others is one of their greatest pleasures. In fact, many of them have gone on to become piano teachers, both full and part time.

Mary-Ann Farrell, Miss New York 1984, currently lives and teaches in New York City, where she has an unusual group of students.

"I literally teach the United Nations," she says. "I have students whose families are from Israel, Japan, Ethiopia, China, Brazil, Germany, Singapore and Yemen. The exposure I received from the Miss America Pageant certainly has helped me to increase my clientele."

Piano teaching and playing is only one of several "businesses" for former Miss Pennsylvania Lynn Grote Tully.

"Every penny my parents spent on lessons for me was worth it, because the piano has always risen to the top as a means for me to achieve the goals I've set," she says. Tully has been teaching piano for just over a year and now has 12 students. She also notes that the pageant connection has been a help in recruiting students.

Tully says her ability to play piano has always been a source of pride. "People are impressed when they learn you have the ability to play the piano well," she explains. "And I've always thought that being able to play was a very nice skill to have."

Though not all former contestants "play for pay," each says she still plays the piano, including Phyllis George, Miss America 1971.

"Being able to play for myself and other people is one of the nicest things about the piano," she says. "It's wonderful way to express yourself through beautiful music."

And her daughter, Pamela, seems to be following in her footsteps. According to George, the 3-year-old has already shown an interest in playing the piano.

For future concert pianists and potential Miss Americas, Carol Janson offers this advice: "Start out slowly, but definitely shoot for the top. Not everyone who tries will succeed, but if you are willing, you can always find ways to perform, to perfect your skills."

State shouldn't meddle with happy hour prices

Last week a state legislative committee unanimously approved a bill which would effectively ban "happy hours." The bill, which prohibits bars and restaurants from offering free or discount drinks at any time, is headed for the House of Representatives and Senate where it is expected to pass. According to State Representative Edith Prague, D-Columbia, the bill is aimed at curbing drunken driving. Supposedly, happy hours — and lower drink prices — encourage people to consume more alcohol than they normally would.

Alcohol can be dangerous. And drunken driving is undeniably a problem. But alcohol is legal and free enterprise is the basis of the American way of life. The government should not meddle in price-setting unless it is for sound economic reasons. This legislation prohibits the businessman's right to react to his competition — and the consumer's right to benefit from this competition.

The legislature justifies its action by saying there is a correlation between happy hours and drunken driving, although the "facts" to attest to this are unreliable and this appears to be only a guess. What the legislature is doing is appealing to the purient interest. Prohibition passed because politicians were afraid to appear immoral, or in any way in favor of alcohol. By concentrating on legislation which claims an attachment to stopping drunken driving (saving lives), the legislators look like the good guys. This is the cause of the year.

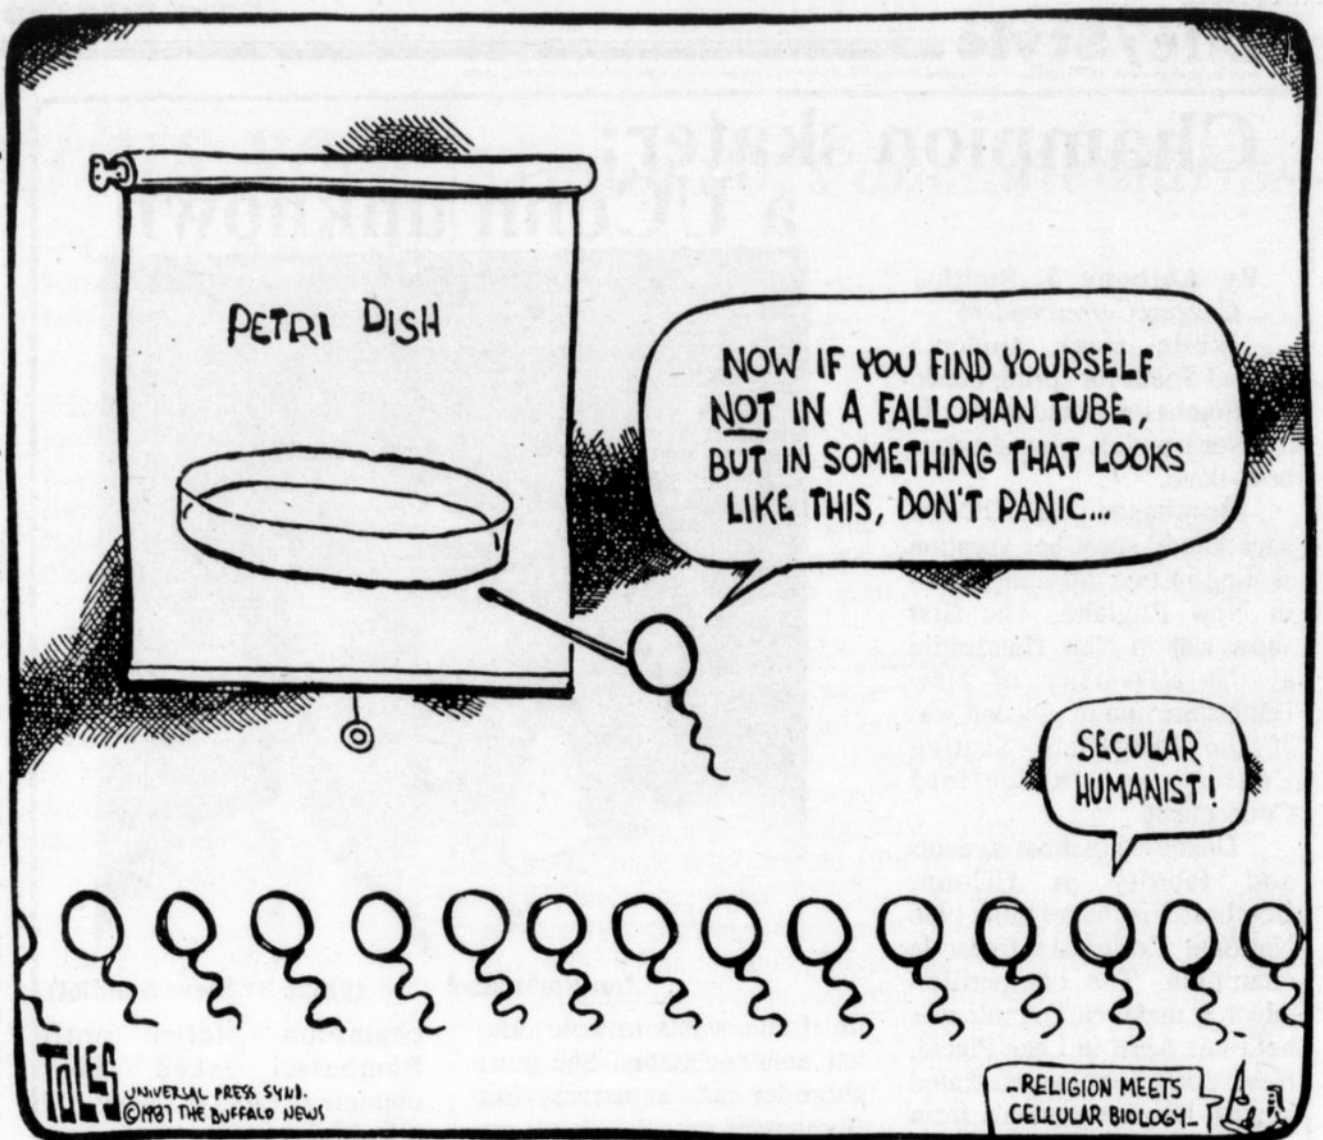

Do officials really believe that the majority of the people will curb their drinking habits if prices are lowered? We've got news for you: many people who drink after work or after classes don't care about the prices. Put some more cops on the road, pass some more laws punishing the drunken driver, but leave free enterprise alone.

It's really just a joke

April Fools Day goes back hundreds of years. It's a day for pranks and good-natured humor. Every year, The Daily Campus takes part in this tradition with its Scampus issue. And, invariably, every year at least a few people complain about what's written.

The Daily Scampus is not out to hurt anybody. It's intended to give its readers (and staff) a little comic relief from the day-to-day news. Take it with a grain of salt. Have some fun. We did.

Bureaucracy breeds acceptance; people will take 'no' for an answer

I've been doing research recently on the attitudes of Chicagoans toward big, powerful, faceless corporations.

The idea is to find out whether people are intimidated by big corporations or whether they will fight back when they feel they are being deprived of service or treated discourteously.

My research has been conducted in this way:

As I've written in the past, one of my office phone numbers is the same as an 800 number that AT&T uses to take calls from customers who have trouble with their phones, questions about phone store locations and other services.

So, if somebody neglects to dial 1-800 and the number, they get me instead of AT&T. This happens at least 20 times a day, sometimes more. And it's been going on for at least two years.

When it began, I asked AT&T why it didn't pick some other number, because I had the number first. They said there just aren't enough unassigned numbers available and I suggested that I change mine. Their suggestion was stupid, because it meant that I could get an unassigned number. If I could get one, why couldn't they? So out of principle, I refused. And I've been stuck with all those phone calls since.

But I recently decided that as long as I'm answering all those wrong numbers, I might as well put them to a constructive use. Thus, my scientific research.

So now when the phone rings and the caller asks if I am AT&T, I say yes, I am.

The caller will usually say something like: "I'm having a problem with my new phone."

And in a bored voice, I'll say: "Sorry, but we don't mess around with that stuff anymore."

Now, if someone said something goofy to you, what would your response be?

I'm sure that you would demand an explanation, insist that you speak to that person's supervisor.

If so, you would be the exception. At least that is what my research shows.

The overwhelming majority of people to whom I've given that strange answer—"Sorry, we don't mess around with that stuff anymore"—have accepted it.

The first man I said it to paused for a couple of seconds, then said: "Oh. OK." And just hung up.

Another said "What am I going to do?"

I told him: "You're just going to have to make the best of it." Which is even more meaningless than, "Sorry, we don't mess around with that stuff anymore."

And he said: "I see." And he hung up.

But what did he see?

Just as I was writing that last sentence, my phone rang and a man said: "I want to know where the AT&T store is downtown."

I said: "Sorry, we don't mess around with that stuff anymore."

Then I heard him say to someone else: "The guy says they don't mess around with that stuff anymore. Yeah, that's what he said." And he said to me: "OK, thank you," and hung up.

Thank me for what?

Some people, fewer than a third, have pursued the issue slightly, asking "why not?" or "since when?" or "what do you mean?"

When that happens, I usually say: "It's the Arabs. The big oil money. They've taken us over. And they don't want us to mess around with that stuff anymore."

Once again, what would you expect the reaction to be? You would think that people would say something like: "What? The Arabs have taken over our telephones? They aren't giving us service? Why haven't I read about that in my newspaper? I'm going to call my congressman. This is terrible."

Not one person has said anything like that. When I tell them that Arab oil tycoons now control their phones and won't mess around with that stuff anymore, they say:

"Oh," and hang up. Or "I see," and hang up. Or "gee," and hang up.

Only one man out of dozens had the But when I told him: "No, we're not messing around with that stuff anymore," he just caved in and said "Yeah, I get you," and hung up.

So what does my research prove?

For one thing, I think it shows that it also proves that people who don't bother to dial 1-800 when the instructions clearly say they should dial 1-800, might wind up being very confused.

Bruce Willis goes 'Blind'

When an executive (Bruce Willis) at a financial management firm takes a blind date to an important client dinner, he only receives one warning from the man who sets him up: "Whatever you do, don't let her drink." Kim Basinger plays Nadia, the title role in this wild comedy directed by Blake Edwards about what happens when Walter ignores the warning, unwittingly turning Nadia into a hilariously devastating force who wrecks his otherwise normal life.

Kim Basinger ("No Mercy", "The Natural", "The Man Who Loved Women") plays Nadia, who, on the surface, appears to be the perfect blind date; Bruce Willis (of "Moonlighting") is Walter, an ambitious executive whose hopes of being promoted explode like champagne bubbles when he accepts a blind date that ends in disaster; and John Larroquette ("Night Court", "Star Trek III") is David, Nadia's psychotically jealous ex-boyfriend, who wages a war of extermination against Walter. Meanwhile, Walter has to cope with the consequences of Nadia's uninhibited behaviour at an important company dinner. High on champagne, she has managed to insult his firm's important new Japanese client, assault Walter's boss (George Coe), slander a French waiter and not only wreck the restaurant but also Walter's future as a financial analyst. This debacle is followed by a series of hilarious and devastating events of the kind that have become the hallmark of the best of Blake Edwards' comedies for over a quarter of a century.

"Blind Date" is Edwards' 45th film, following the recently released "That's Life!" starring Jack Lemmon and Julie Andrews, Blake's lovely and talented actress-wife. His previous productions include such comedy classics as the six "Pink Panther" frolics starring the late Peter

Young soprano in 'Elijah'

An 11-year-old Gales Ferry boy will sing a soprano solo during a performance of Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah" here on April 5.

Andrew Cox, a sixth grade student at Julia W. Long School, will join some 200 singers and musicians on stage for the major choral work presented at 4 p.m. in Jorgensen Auditorium by the UConn School of Fine Arts' music department.

The Ledyard High School Girls Chorus will perform in "Elijah" along with the UConn Concert Choir, Chorale and Symphony Orchestra. Alumni singing in the April 5 performance will be soprano Regina Elliott of New Haven, who now teaches music and drama at UConn; mezzo-soprano Valic Marsh of Bloomfield; and bass-baritone John Shelhart, a native of Watertown who now sings opera in New York City.

Guest tenor Dean C. Shoff of West Haven, who has performed nearly 50 leading tenor roles on opera stages across Europe and the United States, will join the alumni soloists.

Peter Bagley, professor of music at UConn, will conduct the chorus, and Paul Phillips, assistant professor of music, will conduct the orchestra for Mendelssohn's difficult but popular composition.

"Elijah" is rarely presented in live performances in its entirety, according to Bagley. The work is considered one of the greatest oratorios of the 19th century, on a par with works of Bach and Handel.

An oratorio is a showcase for voices and orchestra and presents an extended story, often of religious content. "Elijah" is based on the Old Testament story.

Proceeds for the concert will benefit the John Poellein Choral Scholarship Fund. Tickets for "Elijah" are $5 for the general public and $2 for students, and may be purchased by check payable to UConn and mailed to ELIJAH, The University of Connecticut, School of Fine Arts, U-128, 875 Coventry Road, Storrs, CT 06268.

Tickets may be purchased in person only on the day of the performance, beginning at 3 p.m. at Jorgensen Auditorium. More information is available by calling 486-2260.

"Elijah" is part of the school's 25th anniversary weekend celebration that also features a performance of the play "Rashomon" by the Dramatic Arts Department, a sneak preview of a performance of the award-winning play Amadeus, an exhibit of graphic art of British India at the William Benton Museum of Art on the Storrs Campus, a screening of the concert film "Home of the Brave," and a retrospective exhibit of artwork by alumni of the University.

Sellers, "10", "S.O.B.", "Victor/Victoria", "Micki and Maude", and "The Man Who Loved Women".

Tony Adams, who produced "Blind Date", also produced five previous Blake Edwards films and held top production posts on seven others. Dale Launer, a newcomer to film comedy, came well-qualified for his screenwriting task on "Blind Date". He previously had written the screenplay for "Ruthless People", a black comedy starring Bette Midler and Danny DeVito.

For multi-Academy Award-winning composer Henry Mancini, "Blind Date" is his 24th motion picture collaboration with Edwards. Their association goes back even further, to their television years, when Blake created the popular series "Peter Gunn" and "Mr. Lucky". To date, Mancini's music for Edwards has resulted in 12 Academy Award nominations, four of which produced Oscars.

Also contributing to the musical background of "Blind Date" was Billy Vera, a Los Angeles musician, fronting his group, Billy and the Beaters, whose single, "At This Moment" recently went to number one on the pop charts. They are heard in a disco sequence performing "Let You Get Away", "Oh, What A Nite", and "Anybody Seen Her?" as a brawl erupts, instigated by David trying to destroy Walter. Stanley Jordan, a popular guitarist noted for his unique technique appears in a recording studio scene early in the film; he is supposed to be an old friend of Walter's when the latter was into music and guitar.

"Blind Date" is now showing at various theaters.

SEE ME, FEEL ME, BUY ME

The 1987 Nutmeg Yearbook can't talk, but it can do some pretty interesting things to you. It can't say "See me," but once you see it, it'll remind you of your best times at UConn. The parties, concerts, special events. The things that made your year special. All in spectacular color pictures and witty articles that will bring those memories to life. It can't say "Feel me," either, but the 1987 Nutmeg Yearbook will make you feel as if you were there again. In the library, studying. At the football game, cheering. At the field house, sweating. It will make you feel the past. It can't say "Buy me," but for only ten dollars, everyone can afford to have their own copy. And years from now, you'll be glad to have it around.

No, the 1987 Nutmeg Yearbook can't talk. But then again, it doesn't have to. Order yours today.

SENIORS. THIS IS IT: This is absolutely the last opportunity to have your senior yearbook portrait taken. The official photographer will be on campus until April 10 in SU 368S at the following times. Don't become a faceless non-entity. Have your picture taken today.

SEE ME, FEEL ME, BUY ME

The 1987 Nutmeg Yearbook can't talk, but it can do some pretty interesting things to you. It can't say "See me," but once you see it, it'll remind you of your best times at UConn. The parties, concerts, special events. The things that made your year special. All in spectacular color pictures and witty articles that will bring those memories to life. It can't say "Feel me," either, but the 1987 Nutmeg Yearbook will make you feel as if you were there again. In the library, studying. At the football game, cheering. At the field house, sweating. It will make you feel the past. It can't say "Buy me," but for only ten dollars, everyone can afford to have their own copy. And years from now, you'll be glad to have it around.

No, the 1987 Nutmeg Yearbook can't talk. But then again, it doesn't have to. Order yours today.

Veterans released in spring training

By the Associated Press

Outfielders Mickey Hatcher, Steve Henderson, Darryl Motley and Mike Brown, pitcher Pete Ladd and infielder Dave Stapleton were among the veterans released Tuesday as baseball teams continued to cut down toward the regular season roster limit of 24.

But Graig Nettles, the oldest of all at 42, was guaranteed a spot on the Atlanta Braves roster.

It was a particularly significant day for veterans--the last on which a team can release a veteran without owing him his salary for the full season. The 32-year-old Hatcher, a seven-year major league veteran, was released by Minnesota, with whom he had played since 1981 when the Twins sent Ken Landreaux to the Los Angeles Dodgers. Last season, he hit .278 with three homers and 32 RBI in 115 games, and was hitting just .150 in exhibition games this year.

Hatcher said he views his release with mixed feelings.

"Actually, getting released, for me, is better," he said. "At least I have the opportunity to pick up with more teams than if I had been traded to one team. I hope I get the opportunity to play in the American League again so I can come back to haunt the Twins."

The Seattle Mariners released Ladd, a four-year veteran who pitched in the 1982 World Series with Milwaukee, as well as Stapleton, a utility infielder who spent six years with Boston. The Mariners also sent pitcher Dennis Powell, obtained in an off-season trade with the Dodgers, to AAA Calgary, and released Henderson, a 10-year veteran released last year by Oakland from the Calgary roster.

The 27-year-old Brown, who started last season as Pittsburgh's regular right fielder, was cut by the Pirates.

He was acquired by the Pirates in a 1985 deal and hit .332 with five homers and 33 RBI in 57 games that year. But he hit just .218 with four homers and 26 RBI last season.

North Stars' coach gets the axe

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)—The Minnesota North Stars, in danger of missing the playoffs for the first time since 1979, fired Coach Lorne Henning on Tuesday and temporarily replaced him with Glen Sonmor, director of player personnel and a former North Stars coach.

It marks the seventh season-or partial season-in which the 57-year-old Sonmor has coached for Minnesota since joining the organization in 1978-79. Three times Sonmor has taken over as coach in the middle of a season.

His NHL coaching record, all with the North Stars, is 174-160-81 for a .517 percentage, the highest of any full-time coach in team history.

North Stars General Manager Lou Nanne said he decided to make the change Monday night after watching the team play "listlessly" in the first period of a 6-5 loss to the New York Rangers in what Nanne felt was a crucial game.

By Mike Boland
Daily Campus Staff

The UConn softball team began its 1987 season with a lot of question marks. So far though, they have been getting all the right answers. The team sports an 8-1 record thus far, including four straight wins, and is currently ranked second in both the NCAA Northeast Region and the New England Division I polls. Barring inclement weather, the Huskies will get a chance to add two more wins to that total when they face Central Connecticut today in a 2:30 p.m. doubleheader.

Two big reasons for the team's success are the contributions of Vicki Bartolucci and Sue Rybczyk. Not only are they the teams leading hitter and pitcher respectively, but both women are freshmen.

Bartolucci leads the team in batting (.355) and hits (11), is tied for the team lead in RBIs, total bases and triples (7, 15 and 2), and boasts a .974 fielding percentage at shortstop. Rybczyk, meanwhile, has completed all three of her starts, allowing only one earned run in 24 total innings. Her record is 3-0, and a team low 0.29 ERA.

"Both are impact players," Head coach Karen Mullins said of the two freshmen. "They've had nice starts. The thing I really like is that everybody on the team contributes."

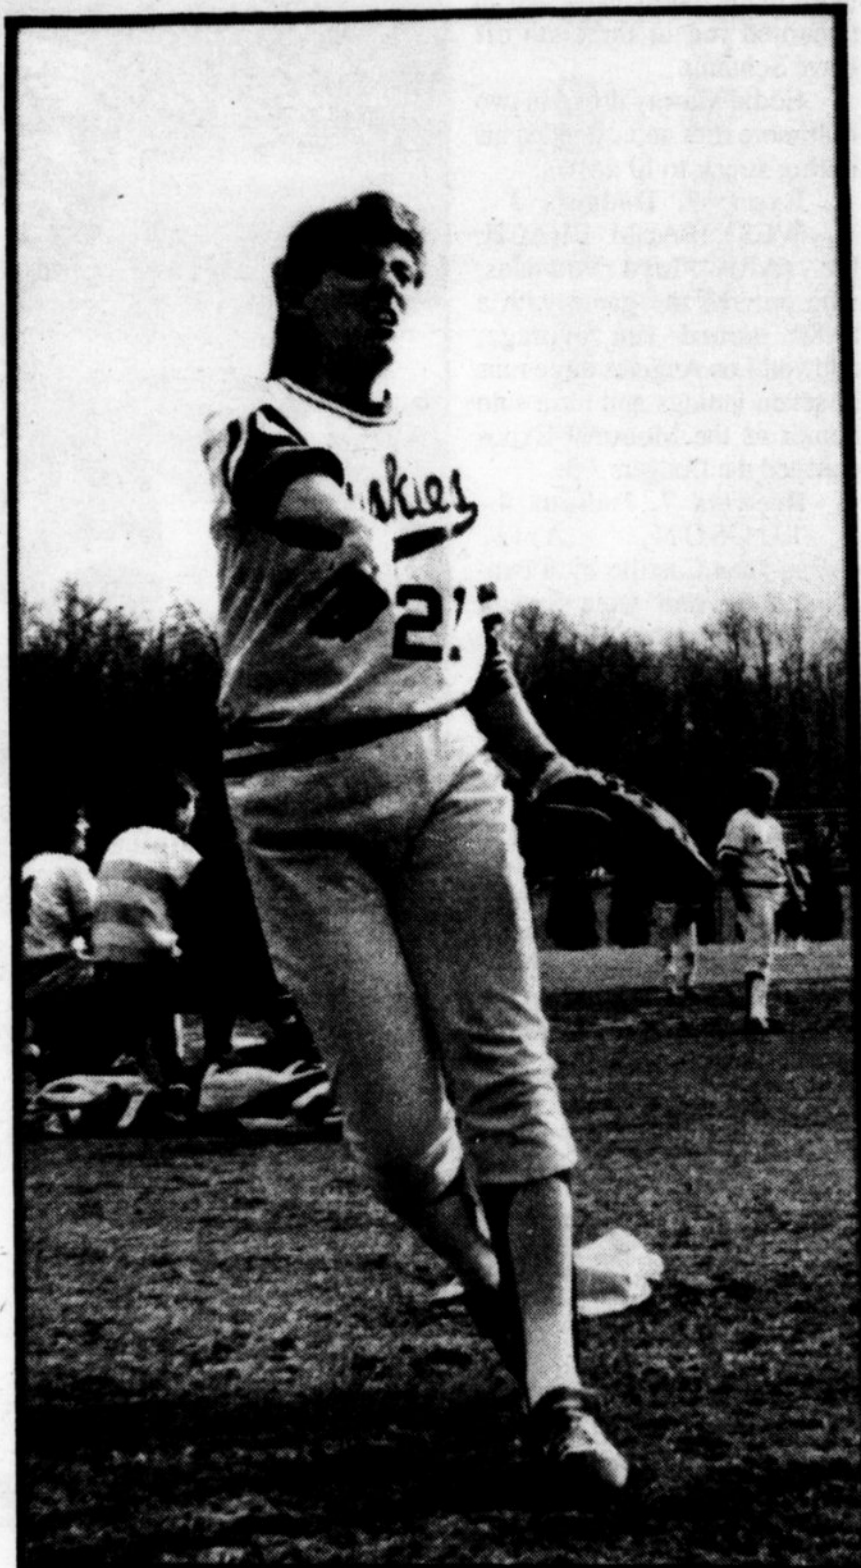

One look over the stats confirms that. Senior Lynn Wisniewski is hitting .320 with 7 RBI and a .600 slugging percentage, junior Dawn Muzoleski is batting at a .308 clip, and senior Robyn Rogers has hit .294 so far. Senior Bonnie Black has scored a team high eight runs. Three other team members are hitting over the .300 mark in limited at-bats.

The key for the Huskies however, is not hitting, but pitching. Although Rybczyk has posted some sparking numbers, the performances of UConn's other two pitchers cannot be overlooked.

Senior Denise Hannon has a 4-1 record and an impressive 1.53 ERA. Hannon has walked only four batters in 32 innings, and has surrendered 22 hits. Sophomore Sharon Arnold has also been stingy, holding a 2.33 ERA, and a 1-0 record.

The total staff ERA is a ridiculously low 1.13. Opposing teams are hitting only .161 off of the Husky pitchers, as opposed to the

UConn team batting average of .254.

This weekend will be a true test for the softball team. The team will host the Husky Invitational, a double elimination event, on Friday and Saturday. Included in the tournament will be UMass, Maine and North Carolina.

UMass (No. 1 in the NCAA Northeast Region) will take on The Lady Tar Heels at noon, while the Huskies will oppose Maine (No. 4 in the region) in the 1:30 matchup. The winners of the two games will meet at 3:30. Saturday will complete the loser's bracket, and the championship game.

"We don't know what to expect," Mullins said. "Maine is fourth in the region, UMass is first, and North Carolina is an excellent team. It's going to be a very competitive field."

Should UConn take first in the tournament it would surely secure a first place spot in the region. And that in itself would be quite a milestone considering that nine of the seventeen women on the roster are either freshmen or sophomores.

"We had a lot of question marks at the beginning of the season with such a young team," Mullins said. "We still have some question marks. We're being cautiously optimistic."

HUSKY NOTES

Karen Mullins, who is in her fourth year as the softball team's head coach, is only six wins away from her 100th career win with the Huskies. In three plus years at UConn, Mullins has accumulated a 94-27-1 record, a winning percentage of .775. Mullins' 1986 squad posted a 31-17-1 mark, finishing third in the NCAA Northeast poll, and placing second in the ECAC Division I tournament.

One of the areas that most concerned Mullins before the season began was team defense. After last Thursday's double header sweep of Rhode Island, the Huskies had ten players with a perfect 1.000 fielding percentage. Seven of those players are regulars. The team average is an air tight .976.
